

Section title(s) Invasion!

Supporting detail: In 1940, the Franks' lives became more frightening because the Nazis began passing laws to remove Jewish people from daily life.	Supporting detail: All Jewish people were banned from trains, buses, and cars. They couldn't go swimming or go see movies. They also had to wear yellow stars on their clothing so the Nazis could target them. They couldn't be out after 8 p.m.	Supporting detail: There were whispers about places called concentration camps, where the Nazis were murdering Jewish people.
Supporting detail: Anne's father came up with the idea to hide in the main building of his pectin business, which contained a hidden annex behind the offices and warehouse.	Central Idea: When Nazi forces invaded the Netherlands in May 1940, life for Jewish people became dangerous and terrifying.	Supporting detail: The Franks dressed in all their clothing and went to the building on a hot July morning in 1942. That was when they began their hiding.
Supporting detail: The Franks planned to hide until the war was over. It was a huge risk, but luckily employees of Mr. Frank agreed to help.		Supporting detail: The Germans had taken over many countries in Europe. The Franks and other Jews realized there was no place Jews could go without risking being killed.