Heroic Rescue on the Mountainside

The article is written from the third-person point of view: It's not Hunter telling the story, it's a narrator.

The first three paragraphs summarize the first, second, and third question-and-answer pairs in the interview.

Starting here, each paragraph summarizes one of the question-and-answer pairs from the interview.

Hunter Nelson, 17, watched helplessly as his friend Danny Riat fell silently through the air. He saw Danny land so hard that his shoes fell off. Then Hunter leaped into action, turning what could have been a tale of tragedy into the story of a heroic rescue.

The two friends had been hiking to a beautiful camping spot near Archer Mountain in Washington State. As they made their way through the woods, the trail got steeper and steeper, until it was nearly vertical. Danny was 70 feet above Hunter when Hunter heard rocks falling. He looked up and saw Danny fly past him.

“He didn’t make any noise as he fell, so it felt unreal, like I was in a dream,” says Hunter. When Danny landed, he was knocked unconscious. “I was sure he was dead,” says Hunter.

A wave of adrenaline swept through Hunter as he rushed to reach his fallen friend. Hunter never felt any fear; he just knew he had to get to Danny. It took Hunter only one or two minutes to scramble down the cliff that had taken them 45 minutes to climb up.

When he reached Danny, Hunter’s survival training kicked in. He checked Danny’s ears and nose for blood, then made sure Danny wasn’t paralyzed. Then Hunter called 911. As they waited for help to arrive, Hunter kept Danny warm by wrapping him in camping gear and blew a whistle to guide the 50 rescuers who were searching for them. Later, he lit a signal fire and waved a torch in the air.

After five hours, a Coast Guard helicopter reached Hunter and Danny. The rescuer and Hunter got Danny into a basket and lifted him up into the helicopter. Once Danny was safely on board, Hunter and the rescuer were lifted into the helicopter as well.

Hunter says that the experience on the mountain has changed him. It has made him want to help people, and he is thinking about a career in search and rescue. “I knew what to do,” says Hunter, “and it helped save Danny’s life.”

The Interview

Scope: You and your friend Danny Riat had a scary experience on your hiking trip. What was your plan?

Hunter: We were going to camp at this place near Archer Mountain in Washington State with beautiful bluffs, waterfalls, and creeks. As we traveled through the woods, it got steeper and steeper. It was nearly vertical.

Scope: What happened then?

Hunter: Danny was 70 feet above me. I heard rocks falling, looked up, and saw him fly over me. He didn't make any noise as he fell, so it felt unreal, like I was in a dream. I watched him fall and land so hard his shoes fell off. He was knocked out. I was sure he was dead.

Scope: You must have been incredibly frightened.

Hunter: I felt this rush of adrenaline and thought, "I have to get down there!" I never felt fear. We had spent 45 minutes climbing that cliff, and it took me one minute, maybe two, to get down to him.

Scope: What did you do when you reached him?

Hunter: I checked his ears and nose for blood, and checked his extremities to make sure he wasn't paralyzed. Then I called 911. While we waited for rescue, I wrapped him in camping gear to keep him warm. There were 50 people looking for us. I blew a whistle to show where we were. As it got dark, I started a signal fire and waved a torch in the air.

Scope: Your survival training kicked in. How did they get you out of there?

Hunter: After five hours, a Coast Guard helicopter came. We got Danny on a backboard and carried him to a basket that they lifted up first. Then they pulled up the rescuer and me.

Scope: Did this experience change you?

Hunter: Yes. It makes me think about what's important. It makes me want to help people. After this, I've thought about a career in search and rescue. I knew what to do, and it helped save Danny's life.
